Natural stones,
fine geometry, and artistry
Shadó – The best shade of design

The dramatic air of Art Deco and the severity of Modernism, Japanese graphic lines and architectural shapes, intricate patterns of gemstones and refined geometry – the multicultural series of Shadó taps combines all the best shades of design.

Shadó was born from the joint creativity of Oliver Jörger, the company's manager, and Anna Mitsykh, the head of Jörger's office in Eastern Europe.

The combination of metal and stone textures defines the aesthetics of this series while an exclusive palette of finishings with 3 natural stones and 16 surface variations makes for a multitude of visual appearances.

“Inspiration turns inert stone into drama.”

Le Corbusier

The new shade of legendary quality: the regular pentagon shape combined with natural decorative stones serves as a design portrait of the Shadó series. Wall-mounted spout, matte black rosettes, and black pentagonal handle of marble.

Strict graphic silhouettes, a matte tactile finish, natural stone, monochrome Shadó taps with black marble handles perfectly implement a new trend in design: the Japandi principle. The fancy pattern of veins on black stone emphasises this style.

Shadó wall-mounted accessories provide some voluminous solid marble details.

Tenderness, sensuality, elegance, and charisma: sculpted handles of white turquoise with the gleam of Sunshine in a neoclassical white airy interior.

Shadó in intriguing blue aventurine and polished nickel

Mysterious aventurine shining like stars, reminiscent of distant worlds. The gemstone's fathomless blue combines with the discreet gleam of polished nickel to give Shadó an atmosphere of refined luxury overlooking the Champs Elysees.

Bright colours, a chiselled silhouette, sparkling intriguing aventurine – Shado in a “black tie” dress within a cinematic multi-layered, opulently decorated interior design with an onyx accent wall: a rare treat for a true connoisseur.

3-hole tap: asymmetrical pentagonal handles with a bevelled side towards the elegant spout.
